CLA - Future Negotiations

Following on from the 'Spain Update' with Javier Gandara last week, you may have heard him talk about how progressing with the new CLA is important to him and how the company want to get negotiations started and finished as quickly as possible.

The reality is that we last held a meeting with them on November 19th and there has been no progress from their side as yet.

We accept the last negotiations went on longer than any of us wanted and we learned lessons from that experience, one of which is to keep our members informed more, even when there is little or no progress, as is the case writing to you today.

We want to highlight that while the company proclaim to want to expedite negotiations as soon as possible, they have started as happened last time, taking 3 weeks to answer some questions we raised thus ultimately delaying the start of the negotiations.

It is our hope to hold an assembly before the seasonal bases go into inactivity but again the company are pushing us right up to that deadline with their inefficiency.

We hope to get some answers soon and we will keep you updated.

PING ID Changeover - 18th December

Don't forget to download and register your easyJet account on the Microsoft Authenticator app as soon as possible. This should take less than 5 minutes to do, and you can find user guides on how to do this on the dedicated MFA page on Inside.

Have a good weekend
